

LSJ 490: Social Justice through Philanthropy

Instructor: Stephen Meyers

Email: sjmeyers@uw.edu (type “LSJ 490” in subject line)

Office & Office Hours: Smith M254, Tuesday 2:30-3:30 pm & by appointment

Location: Mechanical Engineering Building (MEB), Rm. 250

Schedule: Tuesday/Thursday 10:30 am to 12:20 pm

Course Overview & Objectives:

LSJ 490 is a theory and practice-based course on philanthropy where students will develop critical thinking skills and practical knowledge regarding philanthropic giving and ultimately allocate grants to organizations addressing important social issues. The learning goal is for students become aware of the difficulties of “doing good” in the community, yet develop the knowledge, insight, and skills to “do good” more effectively, including in communities that may be very different and distant from our own. The mission of this course is to instill in students a lifelong commitment to responsible philanthropy as a means for creating positive social change in the world around them.

This specific iteration of the class will be themed around “Global Giving,” specifically supporting projects that promote human rights or implement international development and humanitarian assistance projects and programs. This class represents a unique partnership between the Law, Societies & Justice Department, Philanthropy Lab, and Global Washington. The Director of Philanthropy at Brighton Jones will also be providing support to this class.

As an advanced LSJ seminar, this will be an intensive course that will require students to dedicate significant time to readings, writing, research, and practice. There will be both significant amounts of individual and team work throughout. It will also require that not only are students engaged in class discussions and team activities, but also engage with our partners, supporters, and other guests visiting the class throughout the quarter. For example, local philanthropists will be coming to class to explain why and how they give and local non-profit organizations will be coming to class to explain their strategies and programs for addressing important social issues. Ultimately, the class will conclude by students making a direct contribution to advancing social justice in this world by soliciting, evaluating, and funding project proposals from Seattle-based non-profit organizations implementing advocacy campaigns and humanitarian and development projects around the globe.

The course learning objectives are:

- Develop a critical understanding of philanthropic institutions as social problem definers, public priority setters, and policy and program implementers.

- Recognize the ethical implications of philanthropy (or “giving”), particularly across cultures and communities.
- Gain an in-depth understanding of a defined set of complex social issues through reading, research, classroom discussion, and guest lectures.
- Develop a class/course “giving philosophy” and proposal evaluation strategy.
- Write and present team social issue overviews and funding recommendation reports that explain specific issues, models for addressing them, and the merits of different proposals.
- Decide through a collaborative, student-led process which proposals to support and for how much and which proposals to deny.
- Commit to responsible philanthropy as an important individual goal and social practice.

The learning objectives will be met through learning activities that involve building a strong basis in the theory and practice of philanthropy, development, human rights, humanitarianism and cross-cultural program implementation. Students will be divided into teams of five around a specific social issue area and will be responsible for educating the class about that issue, evaluating proposals from organizations addressing the issue, and recommending a proposal for funding. Teams will include five members and must ensure that each member contributes to the have specific responsibilities of 1.) team management, 2.) collective writing, 3.) presentation preparation, 4.) scheduling meetings, and 5.) taking notes. Teams are responsible for ensuring everyone does their part and equally contributes. Team members will receive both a collective team grade and an individual grade, based on the evaluation of their peers, for presentations and briefs.

Collectively, as a class, students will then decide how to allocate $82,000 through one grant of $35,000, two grants of $15,500, and two grants of $8,000 each across those recommended proposals. At the end of the quarter and course, the class will then present the grant awards in a “Giving Ceremony.”

Partners and Supporters:

The Philanthropy Lab is a private foundation that has provided $82,000 to this class to be given away. The Philanthropy Lab, which began in 2011 and works with twenty partner schools in the US ranging from Harvard to Stanford to now the University of Washington, is dedicated to increasing philanthropy education within university curriculum. Its mission is “to spark and expand students’ interest and participation in philanthropy; increase the prevalence and priority of philanthropy education in U.S. colleges and universities; and become self-sustaining at our partner schools.” To learn more about the Philanthropy Lab, you can visit their website at <https://www.thephilanthropylab.org/default.aspx>. A representative from the Philanthropy Lab will also be visiting our class in order to tell us more about their program and to learn about the University of Washington and this class.

Global Washington is a network of over a hundred small non-governmental organizations (NGOs), large NGOs, businesses, foundations, and academic institutions in the state of Washington. Global Washington's mission is to "support the global development community in Washington state that is working to create a healthier and more equitable world. Global Washington promotes its members, brings them together to spark new ideas and partnerships, and builds a network of leaders improving lives around the world." Global Washington's members are organized around twenty-two issue areas ranging from education and clean water through to human rights and women's empowerment. We will work with Global Washington to hone that list down to just five issue areas that we will investigate as a class, solicit proposals from their members doing that work, and allocate funds to. To learn more about Global Washington, you can visit their website at: <http://globalwa.org/>.

Inclusion and Accommodation

I want to note that because this is a discussion and team work oriented class that will include a focus on diverse cultures. The class will also require students to actively debate and negotiate with one another over the decisions made collectively in class. As such, we have a shared responsibility to make this class an inclusive and respectful space where everyone feels that they are welcome and can participate, regardless of gender, religion, disability, race and ethnicity, sexuality, national origin, migratory status, political beliefs, or any other identity or experience. My hope is that this class challenges each of us, including me as your professor, to be better global and local citizens through the acquisition of knowledge and the appreciation of difference. Also, if you have any specific needs or particular concerns, please feel free to discuss those with me privately so that we can figure out the necessary accommodations. Lastly, I am excited to teach this course and to get to know each of you. Please make use of my office hours! If you cannot make it to my posted hours, I am very happy to set up appointments with you.
