“To give away money is an easy matter in any man’s power. But to decide to whom to give it, and how large and when, and for what purpose and how, is neither in every man’s power nor an easy matter. Hence, it is that such excellence is rare, praiseworthy and noble.” -- Aristotle, 384-322 BC

“What is the use of living, if it be not to strive for noble causes and to make this muddled world a better place for those who will live in it after we are gone?” -- Winston Churchill, 1908

“I hear that in New York
A man stands on the corner of Broadway and 26th Street
Every evening during the winter months
And procures for the homeless who gather there
By entreating passersby a place for the night.

The world is not thereby made different
Relations between human beings are not improved
The age of exploitation is not thereby shortened
But a few men have a place for the night
The wind is kept away from them one night long
The snow destined for them falls in the street

Don't put the book down yet, you who are reading it, man!

A few people have a place for the night
The wind is kept away from one night long
The snow destined for them falls in the street
But the world is not thereby made different
Relations between human beings are not thereby improved

The age of exploitation is not thereby shortened.”

Berolt Brecht, “Places for the Night”, 1931

“Living just enough for the city...” -- Stevie Wonder, 1973

“Will our economic success make us more generous or more self-absorbed? More idealistic about the aspirations of the founding fathers and the work of our forefathers in making American life what we so comfortably inherit? Or will the diminished need to struggle as hard as other generations lessen our imagination about how to address the needs of others and fix what is still broken in our society? Either society is possible. One will build our society; the other will erode and slowly degenerate it over the first few decades of the twenty-first century.” -- Claire Gaudiani, 2003

COURSE OVERVIEW

There are many forces that keep cities vibrant and livable. There are many forces that are clearly visible and acknowledged – government and commerce – for the good that they provide. But there are other forces that are not so readily acknowledged, and yet, play a key role in ensuring that a city not only functions but is a strong community of civility, health, education, and culture.

It is the combination of nonprofits and philanthropic funds that fuels this latter work. In Philadelphia, nonprofits and philanthropy have had a long history of activity and action. Currently, there are 7,000 nonprofits in Greater Philadelphia (and over 1,500,000 in the U.S.) and over $6 billion of endowed funds dedicated to philanthropic endeavors. Indeed, the largest employer in the City of Philadelphia is a nonprofit. Answer: The University of Pennsylvania.

Much is expected of this so-called third sector. Not only to provide shelter for the night for the homeless that Brecht describes, but also to tackle more complex issues such as alleviating poverty in urban communities today. Fair or unfair, nonprofits and philanthropy are being asked to try and fill the growing chasm between the haves and have-nots. In addition, the third sector is called on to tackle issues that government cannot address or is not willing to address, thanks to a maddening collision of current and prevailing political attitudes. This is quite a challenge. Some say it impossible; the challenge is far too steep. Others argue that this country's nonprofits are dynamic and resilient and can indeed meet the challenge – by being deeply connected to the communities they serve and being nimble enough to provide the services that are truly needed.

What sustains the nonprofit sector is revenue from government, business, and private individuals. For close to a century, federal, state and local governments have paid nonprofits to deliver services and programs of all kinds. Philanthropic support from corporations, foundations and private citizens has provided nonprofits with funds to nurture social, cultural and environmental innovations. The testing of new ideas -- entrepreneurial ideas -- that can positively change the way human beings are treated or help neighborhoods become transformed are fueled by philanthropy.

According to Giving USA, $390 billion was given to charities in 2016 (and approximately $500 million was given to Greater Philadelphia-based nonprofits). And while it may appear to be easy to give money away, it is, as Aristotle pointed out some 2300 years ago, not an easy matter, and ever more challenging today. The reasons for this are complex. Some are contextual: the nonprofit sector has dramatically changed since the recession of 2008. Some are analytical: Will poverty be alleviated through access to capital, education, health, or responsive government? Some are issue-based: How one supports K-12 education reform efforts is surely very different than how one supports the arts or environmental groups. And some of the reasons are very much determined by the ability (or lack thereof) of the nonprofit itself to deliver outputs, outcomes and/or impact – however those elements are to be defined by the nonprofit itself let alone other stakeholders.

This class explores philanthropy and its impact on urban communities. While much can be learned and gained from reading and reviewing various books, articles, and websites, the instructors strongly believe in bringing the class into the community and see various projects but also to meet and engage with the leaders behind these efforts. We hope (and plan) that the class is a bridge between theory and practice. Both inform each other. We are deeply fortunate that Philadelphia provides such a full array of organizations and programs that are committed to tackling and solving issues and problems that confront us as a community. And thanks to a generous support from Urban Studies and the Nonprofit Leadership Program, we are also fortunate that you will have the real challenge of making decisions about where $30,000 in grant money will be allocated to nonprofits in the community. The opportunity to provide grants in this manner is, indeed, unique. This class at Penn is only one of 15 universities in the United States that are provided resources of this kind so that the students can participate in philanthropy that is “real time/real life.” Indeed, there is a chance to provide additional support thanks to matching support from The Philanthropy Lab of the Once Upon A Time Foundation in Fort Worth, Texas.

The instructors hope that by the end of the class and the semester, students will know what it means when Stevie Wonder aurally describes “living just enough for the city.” And that there is a confederation of nonprofit managers, philanthropists, groups and organizations that are doing the best they can to ensure that, and perhaps, just a little bit more.

COURSE FORMAT

This will be an active three-hour class. The instructors have knowledge and experience to impart, but very much see themselves as facilitators. We will keep lecturing to a minimum. In the course of the semester, we will read various books, articles, and documents and discuss them. Be ready to do so. You will meet leaders from the nonprofit and philanthropic community. Be ready to engage them. In the course of the semester, you will visit projects or programs in Philadelphia. Be ready to observe and absorb.

Again, we really want to use the class experience as a bridge between theory and practice. The readings we discuss in class and the speakers we invite into the class complement each other. We will spend time in each session exploring the readings and interacting with the speakers.

This course is not for the student who wants to receive information and then simply present it back in the form of papers. We are looking for students who want to engage with the material and the people in this vibrant sector. Class participation is vital and will count toward your overall grade (see next section). Get to know your classmates as the journey in this work is better understood and enjoyed by shared experience.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

There are three major components for this course.

1. Class participation. Class attendance and preparation are critical. All of us bring different perceptions and ideas to this dialogue about cities and how they function.

Prepare for each class by reviewing the readings, and be ready to provide an open and comfortable atmosphere in which to share comments and participate.

2. Philanthropic Framework (due March 1) See below.

3. Final project (due April 26) Students in the class will be broken up into five teams. Each team will be tasked with establishing a “private foundation.” Each team will be allocated $5,000+ to distribute in the form of a grant to a nonprofit based in the City of Philadelphia. Each team will have to develop a vision, mission and a set of grantmaking guidelines that will, in turn, help to focus the team on what issues and nonprofits they intend to support and why. This Philanthropic Framework will be due on March 1 and each group will have to present its framework to the rest of the class for feedback.

The second step of the project will be to identify a nonprofit to support. The nonprofit you intend to support must be reviewed by the team. All aspects of the nonprofit – mission, program effectiveness, capacity of management and board to lead the organization, and fiscal strength – must be considered before providing a grant. At the final class of the semester, April 26, each team will make a presentation on their foundation and what grant they have made and why. Each team will be allotted 15 minutes in which to make their presentation and defend their grants. Each team will provide to the instructors a copy of their presentation as well as a write-up of their grant recommendation. The grade on the final project will be based on the content of the memo AND the strength of the presentation. Each team member will receive the same grade so collaboration and esprit de corps will be essential.

Content of the write-up and presentations will be graded for clarity and sharpness of the ideas articulated. If you have some doubt about your ability to express your ideas appropriately, please see the instructors. We will make sure you are connected with a Penn Writing Fellow. We would also suggest reading two fine books on writing. Both are classics and indispensable when it comes to mastering the written word. They are Elements of Style by E.B. White and On Writing Well by William Zissner.

Your final grade will be calculated as follows:

Final Project	50%
Philanthropic Framework	25%
Class attendance and participation	25%

COURSE READINGS

ABOUT THE INSTRUCTORS:

Doug Bauer is Executive Director of The Clark Foundation. The Foundation focuses on helping individuals out of poverty and then leading independent and productive lives, and supports nonprofits and programs in New York City and Cooperstown, NY. Doug manages not only the Clark Foundation but is also executive director of the Scriven and Fernleigh Foundations and a Senior Vice President of The Clark Estates, Inc. Together, the three foundations have assets over $750 million and provides over $35 million in grants, scholarships and programs annually. Prior to Clark, Doug was a Senior Vice President with Rockefeller Philanthropy Advisors (RPA) from 2002 to 2009 and led the organization's Strategic Initiatives Team. Prior to joining RPA, he was a Vice President at Goldman Sachs and President of the Goldman Sachs Philanthropy Fund, the firm's charitable gift fund. From 1997 to 2000, Doug was Director of Community Partnership at SmithKline Beecham (now GlaxoSmithKline) and Executive Director of the SmithKline Beecham Foundation, where he focused on community-based health care around the world. From 1992 to 1996, Doug was a Program Officer for Culture at the Pew Charitable Trusts. And from 1988 to 1992, he managed the Scott Paper Company Foundation.

Doug's opinions and ideas on philanthropy have been featured in the Associated Press, The Chronicle of Philanthropy, Contribute, the Financial Times, the Los Angeles Times, The New York Post, Stanford Social Innovation Review, The Wall Street Journal and on CNBC, NPR and PBS. Doug co-authored, with Steven Godeke, Philanthropy's New Passing Gear: Mission Related Investing, A Policy and Implementation Guide for Foundation Trustees. Doug is a past chair of Philanthropy New York and current co-chair of its Public Policy Committee and also serves on boards of The Leatherstocking Corporation, The Melalucca Foundation, the National Council of Nonprofits, Partners for Health Foundation, and the Rockefeller Institute of Government. He is also an adjunct faculty member at the Columbia Business School.

Doug is a graduate of Michigan State University. He also has a M.S. from Penn and a M.J. from Temple University.

Greg H. Goldman is a Vice President of the National Audubon Society and Executive Director of Audubon Pennsylvania. He was Vice President, Development, and a member of the Philadelphia Zoo's senior management team from 2011 through 2016. Prior to joining the Zoo, Greg served as a Federal Program Officer for the US Commerce Department's Broadband Technology Opportunity Program (BTOP), where he directed millions of dollars to broadband expansion and digital literacy programs across the US. From 2006-2010, he was CEO of The Digital Impact Group (previously known as Wireless Philadelphia), a major City-wide effort designed to close the digital divide by extending Internet access to low income families and small businesses across Philadelphia. Other executive positions include Executive Director of the Delaware Valley Regional Economic Development Fund, Vice President of Korman Communities, a Philadelphia-based residential real estate company, and Executive Director of MANNA, a local organization that delivers nourishment to people living with HIV/AIDS and other illnesses. During his six-year tenure there, the organization's service capacity and budget more than doubled, and its reach extended to include all 11 counties of the tri-state region.

From 1992 to 1998, Greg was the Senior Program Officer at The Philadelphia Foundation, where he directed financial resources to dozens of community based organizations throughout the City and region. He directed the $1.5 million Summer Career Exploration Program, coordinated the selection process for the Williams Award for Organizational Excellence, and served as the Chair of the Skills Building Working Group of Delaware Valley Grantmakers, now known as the Philanthropy Network.

Goldman also served as Program Officer at the Field Foundation of Illinois, and as a consultant to several philanthropic organizations in Chicago, including the Lawyers Trust Fund of Illinois, the Illinois Facilities Fund, and the corporate giving program of Marshall Field's, Chicago's leading retailer. He was chair of the Poverty Task Force of the Donor's Forum of Chicago.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Northwestern University, Greg holds a Master's Degree in public policy from the University of Chicago. He is also the recipient of the prestigious Eisenhower Fellowship, an international professional development program for emerging community leaders.
